

What to Wear on Your Colorado Rafting Adventure

- Bathing suits and shorts are recommended for rafting and kayak adventures. Wear loose, woven materials such as wool, polypro, fleece, micro fleece, polyester, waterproof jackets and any other outdoor material that dries fast.
- On your feet, wear old tennis shoes (that you don't mind getting wet) or sandals that latch around the ankle. Crocs, flip-flops and bare feet can be impractical and unsafe for whitewater rafting.
- Staying dry, or at least drying off fast, is the key to staying warm on whitewater rafting trips.
- There is limited space on the rafts, so you should limit what you bring to what you can wear. Bringing towels in the raft doesn't do you much good because there is no way to keep them dry during your rafting trip.
- Skip the cotton clothing, as it tends to get wet and stay wet, especially when enjoying the thrills of Colorado whitewater rafting!
- We rent wet suits, booties, and splash tops for all whitewater rafting and kayak adventures. This equipment is designed to keep you warm and comfortable.

Personal flotation devices (PFDs) and helmets are included with all rafting and kayaking adventures.

What to Bring on Your Colorado Rafting Adventure

- Bring a few towels to leave in your car; you'll be happy to have something to dry off with after whitewater rafting.
- Bring a change of dry clothes to leave in your car; all three of our basecamps offer changing rooms so you can be comfortable after your Colorado raft adventure.
- Bring sunscreen, sunglasses, sunglass straps and hats that protect from the sun. If you forget, all three basecamps offer these items in the retail areas where our whitewater rafting trips meet.
- Bring water for pre-rafting and post-rafting hydration. Remember, you're in the Colorado Rockies, and it's important to stay hydrated!
